Something About the Sandwich Isl-

The death of King Kamehameha has attracted public attention to the Sandwich Islands, and the interest in that "paradise for an indolent man," as Mark Twam calls it, is heightened by the annexation talk. Mark spent some months in these islands, in the center of the Pacific ocean, two thousand miles from any continent, six years ago, and has written to the New York Tribune a characteristic letter about his experiences, which has some interesting data mixed with its humorous sallies. It is like his late book, for which he apologizes that it contains considerable information, in spite of all he could do to the contrary. Of the Sandwich Island climate he says it is simply delicious-never cold at the sea level, and never really too warm, for you are at the halfway house-that is, twenty-degrees above the equator. But then you may order your own climate for this reason: the eight inhabited islands are merely mountains that lift themselves out of the sea-a group of bells, if you please, with some (but |not very much) "flare" at their bases. Well, you take a thermometer, and mark on it where you want the want the mercury to stand permanently forever (with not more than 12 degrees variation) winter and summer. If 82 in the shade is your figure (with the privilege of going down or up 5 or 6 degrees at long intervals), you build your house down on the "flare" -the sloping or level ground by the sea-shoreand you have the deadest surest thing in the world on that temperature. And such is the climate of Honolulu, the capital of the kingdom.

The natives of the island only number about 50,000, and the whites about 3,000, chiefly Americans. According to Captain Cook, the natives numbered 400,000 less than a hundred years ago. But, says Twain, the traders brought labor and fancy diseases-in other words, long, deliberate, infallible destruction. No doubt in fifty years a Kanaka will be a curiosity in his own land. They are the simplest, the kindest-hearted, the most unselfish creatures that bear the image of their Maker. Any native who has an income of $50 a year can vote. The 3,900 whites in the island handle all the money and carry on all the commerce and agriculture-and superintend the religion. Americans are largely in the majority. These whites are sugar-planters, merchants, whale-ship officers, and missionaries. The missionaries, says Twain, are sorry the most of the other whites are there, and these latter are sorry the missionaries don't migrate. The most of the belt of sloping land that borders the sea and rises toward the bases of the mountains, is rich and fertile. There are only 200,000 acres of this productive soil, but only think of its capabilities! In Louisiana, 200,000 acres of sugar land would only yield 50,000 tons of sugar per annum, and probably not so much; but in the Sandwich Islands you could get at least 400,000 tons. Now if any one desires to know why the planters would probably like to be under our flag, the answer is simple: We make them pay, as a duty, four cents a pound on refined sugars at present; brokerage, freights, and handling (two or three times,) costs three cents more; rearing the cane, and making the sugar, is an item of five cents more-total, 12 cents a pound, or within a cent of it, anyhow. And to-day refined ongar is only worth about 12% cents (wholesale) in our markets. Profit-none worth mentioning. But if we were to annex the islands and do away with that crushing duty of four cents a pound, some of those heavy planters who can hardly keep their heads above water now, would clear $75,000 a year and upward. Mark, in conclusion wants to know why newspaper correspondents so calmly ignore the true heir to the Sandwich Islands throne, as if he had no existence and no chances; "our staunch American sympathizer, Prince William Lunalilo, descendant of eleven generations of sceptered savages-a splendid fellow, with talent, genius, education, gentlemanly manners, generous instincts, and an intelleet that shines as radiantly through floods of whisky as if that fluid but fed a calcium light in his head." It is these floods of whisky no doubt that are spoiling the chances of "Prince Bill," although he does stand "next to the

We are glad to note that the plan which originated with Dr. C. C. Cox, of this city, (and which has heretofore been referred to in these columns,) for the organization of a National Sanitary Bureau, to be attached to the Department of the Interior, has, with a few unimportant exceptions, received the cordial approval of the press and of sanitarians of eminence. A writer in a late issue of the New York Evening Post, who is understood to be Stephen Smith, M. D., president of the New York board of health, and also of the American public health association, warmly endorses the project of such a bureau, and alludes to the fact that Bismarck is organizing a similar branch of the Prussian government at Berlin. He believes a national sanitary bureau would be of incalculable value. It could, as in England, by its timely advice, secure the co-operation of all the health authorities in the adoption of measures of protection against approaching or prevailing epidemics. Cholera, yellow fever, &c., have as fixed laws governing their course and progress as the storms, and a central bureau at Washington, as accurately informed of the daily progress of such epidemics as the Signal Service Bureau is of the course and progress of storms, could with quite as much accuracy foretell their appearance at a given locality. A bureau which could thus display its "danger signals" of approaching pestilences, and, by enabling communities to make suitable preparation, could arrest the progress of the hordes of roving epidemics which decimate our cities and villages, would certainly be of a pecuniary value equal to the cost of sustaining such a service. The writer closes with the prediction that the day is not far distant when the public sentiment of the United States, as of Great Britain, will demand that the measures for promoting the health of the people shall not be less effectual than those promoting agriculture and education. We have already expresed our views in favor of the bill recently introduced by Senator Patterson, providing for the organization of the bureau referred to. It commends itself to the thoughtful consideration our national legislators, and its passage add materially to the fame of the present

In his late address at Cincinnati before the engine builders' convention on capital and labor, Gen. Leggett, Commissioner of Patents. me de some suggestions which are eminently se sible and practical. He recommended first. that pay-day be transferred from Saturday to nday; second, that the scale of prices be find according to the value of the services perlormed; third, that certificates of character and for skill in workmanship be granted; fourth, that healthful homes with more of the comforts and refinements of life be afforded workmen; and fifth, that business men attend the primary political meetings and see that none but honest and competent men are nominated for office. The first, second, and fifth suggestions will strike of paying off on Monday instead of Saturday has already been adopted to some extent, with satisfactory results, since it tends to prewent much drunkenness and consequent waste of money by the improvident. The payment of labor according to its value is a rule already in practice in many branches of industry, and ought to prevail more generally. It will be a long time we fear before General L.'s last recommendation will prevail. Wendell Phillips, Anna Dickinson, and others graphically depict the deplorable consequences arising from the indifference of the great mass of respectable people to political issues, and urge the remedy as the only salvation for the republic. For the pains, bewever, such advisers come to be regarded as common scolds, and but little attention is paid to their warnings. The people close their ears to disagreeable truths, and in too many cases the political "strikers" rule the primary meetings without a word of protest.

The execution of criminal justice is so lax in New York that every body was surprised when the Stokes jury brought in a verdict of murder, It will be a matter of astonishment if has exePINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

The Wall street markets were dull yesterday. The Wall street markets were dall yesterday, the recent sterm having interfered with business by injuring the telegraph lines. The money market is slowly but steadily getting back to a condition where borrowers can supply their wants at reasonable rates; already mercantile paper is better. It is not reasonable to expect, however, that money will become very easy at present, the bank reserves being still lower than prudent banking, under existing laws, justifies.

Dr. Tutt: In gratitude for the benefit received by the use of your Expectorant, I do cheerfully add my testimony to its most wonderful effects in relieving Asthma or Bronchitis. For several years I had suffered dreadfully with severe attacks of Asthma or difficulty of breathing. I was induced by the high recommendations given to your Expectorant to try it, and found that it gave almost immediate relief. It is about five months since I began its use; I have used six bottles, and have not had an attack since. It has been a great blessing to me; I cannot afford to be without it, and I heartily recommend it to all persons who are at all troubled with lung or throat diseases. Very respectfully, Mrs. A. M. At a time when the small Pox and other diseases threaten to spread so rapidly in consequence of the extreme severity of the weather, it is of the greatest importance to build up our constitutions, in order to resist and first against all the kinds of pernicious influences which surround us; therefore, it would be impossible to call too strongly the attention of the public on this very important point, that is the une of Bitteen prepared with the greatest care, according to the principles of the medical art, and which, in consequence of their action on the blood, stomach, liver and principal organs of the body, produces such inconfestable results. Moreover, it is so agreeable to the taste that there is no tonic which can be compared to them. If you want to be answinned go to your crussist, and ask for Dr. L. G.
